

I have a dream that one day, humanity will unify and complete its final travel.

I have a dream that one day on this round, blue planet, Russia and the United States, two countries known for a history of conflict and wars, will be able to combine forces and discuss peacefully.

I have a dream that one day we will explore the mysteries of the universe and that we will cooperate with another form of life to finally understand that mankind is not alone.

I have a dream, and this dream will be achieved if we pull together.

This is my hope.

With this faith, we will answer the questions of science.

With this faith, humanity will finally expand and will not disappear.

If all men work together without discrimination and if we find true peace, this will become true.
