

I have a dream that one day, every child on this planet will have access to quality education, regardless of their race, wealth, or geographic location.

I have a dream that one day, schools all around the world will be equipped with sufficient resources to provide a rich learning experience for all students.

I have a dream that one day, advanced educational technologies will be accessible in every classroom, allowing every child to reach their full potential.

I have a dream that one day, education will not only be the road to employment but also a means to promote understanding and discover diverse cultures.

This is my hope.

With this faith, knowledge and education will become the subject upon which societies build a future of equality, prosperity, and peace.

With this faith, we will work hard to dismantle the barriers to education, to innovate, and to inspire.

With this faith, we will see a world where every child can dream big and achieve even bigger.

With this faith, we will witness the birth of a generation empowered by knowledge, driven by curiosity, and united by common goals.

And if we are to see this dream become a reality, then access to education must become true for every child, in every corner of the world.

This must become true, so that we can unlock the full potential of humanity and pave the way for a brighter, more inclusive future for all.
