

I have a dream that one day, money will disappear in order to stop inequalities between people.

I have a dream that no matter the race, the culture, the family background, rich and poor will be the same.

I have a dream that citizens will be motivated to work without having the goal of money.

My dream is for children to be free to choose their future job without asking themselves how much money they will earn and if it will be enough to live in this world.

I have a dream that one day, the famous picture showing the shocking difference in Brazil between slums and skyscrapers will no longer be true.

This is my hope.

With this faith, we will be able to transform stairs of difference into a scale of justice.

With this faith, we will be able to eat together, to work together, to travel together, to study in our favorite school together.

With this faith, we will be able to finally find true happiness because we will no longer be depressed, anxious or even jealous.

And if we all want to live equally in this world, this must become true.
