

I have a dream that one day everyone will achieve their hardest goals and dreams.

I have a dream that every human being will find happiness even amidst struggles.

I have a dream that peace will keep men united, and that unnecessary hate will disappear.

I have a dream and it must become true with the help of justice, equality, and love.

This is my hope. Every human being, regardless of race, skin color or gender should be treated equally.

With this faith, we will stop useless violence.

With this faith we will accept finite disappointment, but never lose infinite hope.

And if each one of you believes in me and in us this must become true.
